Nothing short of criminal is the plan of Turlock "service" clubs to reduce the surplus of eggs by staging a pitched battle this Friday with hen-fruit for ammunition. In the first place, there is no surplus —not if you can believe the stories of hungry families in California and elsewhere; there is never any surplus, but always, in some quarters, a deplorable lack of money with which to buy even the bare necessities of life. In the second place, even if there should be a surplus (which there cannot be) that would be a h—— of a way to reduce the supply. Much better, it seems to our feeble intelligence, to give this food, which must not be put on the market, to other service clubs to distribute to the needy. If they want to get rid of the works in one fell swoop we venture to say that the Salvation Army in any big city would take the lot with many thanks. The Turlock clubs would, by following either course, secure a lot of favorable publicity, whereas if they stick to their idea of destroying all that nourishment they are going to get a black eye not only in California, but thruout the entire country.

It is the favorite argument of many of our internationalists who propose placing Uncle Sam in the League of Nations or the League Court, that we must join immediately in order to prevent another world catastrophe similar to the great war. They start from the assumption that the world is again about to be plunged into bloody strife and that it is only our entrance into the game of European politics which can prevent this. Now the League of Nations and the World Court are already going concerns. It is true that Uncle Sam remains on the outside, wisely as most Americans think, and it is equally true that he is now as he has always been, ready and willing to co-operate for world peace. Just how our mere entrance into a world political organization will prevent the outbreak of hostilities, these internationalists do not take the trouble to explain. As we can co-operate just as well if not better on the outside than within, there must be some other reason. Perhaps they feel that if Uncle Sam were once tied up securely he would be bound to use his army and navy in the "preservation" of peace. If this is the reason for our entry inside the internationalist portals, then most Americans will continue to believe that it is better to remain on the outside.

As a matter of fact our getting ourselves mixed up in foreign entanglements would not tend to insure the peace of the world, but rather to assure more troubles for Uncle Sam. It seems to be a sort of unreasoning belief on the part of internationalists that we can do nothing unless securely bound by some political arrangement. And yet it is a matter of fact that during the past ten years all great constructive steps for peace have been taken outside the League of Nations and outside the World Court. The disarmament agreements, the Locarno Pact and the Kellogg treaty are examples. It is true, too, that there has been much dissension inside the league and that the members themselves seem to regard it with suspicion rather than with confidence.

Speaking of international agreements outside the League and the League court, the recent agreement on the production and marketing of sugar is a good example. This agreement on the limitation of output, in the interest of the sugar industry everywhere, was brought about under the leadership of an American, Thomas L. Chadbourne, of New York. It was brought about in voluntary conferences resulting in a voluntary agreement, entirely outside the League and the League Court. The agreement was only reached because there was no entangling rules and commitments to start with. No international political organization had anything to do with it. Compare this constructive accomplishment on the one hand with what the League of Nations has been trying to do during the past ten years in the way of disarmament and control of narcotics and human slavery, removal of trade barriers and so on. The league's efforts have accomplished little while the voluntary conference under Mr. Chadbourne has met with success. Here is something for the league advocates to study over. As the Chicago Tribune recently well said:

"Europe recognizes the impotence of the league. When Europe wishes to accomplish something it flees from league auspices, as it did in the organization of the international bank. America outside the league can accomplish much, as Mr. Chadbourne, Mr. Taylor, General Dawes, Mr. Young and others have shown in bringing about international agreements. If we were in the league we should be impelled to use that agency of frustration for adjusting our international contracts with loss to ourselves and incidentally to the rest of the world. Professional altruists who are forever complaining that our potential influence for good in a wicked world is being dissipated because we will not go to Geneva might well consider how little the league has done and how much has been accomplished outside the league, largely thru American efforts."

That's all.

PROGRAM FOR FEB. 23 NEARS COMPLETION; LOOKS GOOD

Plans for Old Settlers day, local galla event, which this year falls on Monday, Feb. 23 ,instead of the 22nd, as is usual, are rapidly nearing completion, according to H. M. Shadle, chairman of the day. The program committee reports that by next week they should be able to publish the details of the celebration in full.

The afternoon program, which will be in the hands of old settlers from this and other communities of the county is shaping up well, according to Harry Smith, who has been engaged for some weeks in rounding up speakers from all over the county. These old folks will tell of the early days in their own communities.

The ball game, scheduled to follow the afternoon program, is in the capable hands of Antone Ferro, manager of the local ball club. He has secured a game with the fast Johnny Walters team of Palo Alto and promises a hot game, weather permitting. The proceeds of the game are to go to the grammar school P. T. A.

Publicity detailing the evening show will be on the street within the next few days.

The whiskerino contest is on the up-grade, with practically every man in town growing some sort of foliage. There are some hefty looking beards in town, and it has been suggested that besides the five dollar prize for the best whiskers in the county there will be an additional prize for the best strictly home-grown avriety. We'll have further details on this next week. In the meantime, grow a few whiskers.

The old time dance to be staged by the Orchard City Grange Saturday night, Feb. 21, as part of the celebration, promises to be an amusing affair. Arrangements are being made to have an old time "caller" on the floor. Ancient costumes will be in order, and the ladies are already ransacking attic trunks for bustles and what-nots. Young and old plan to attend thte altogether appropriate hop.

THE SPORT FORUM
By DICK LYNDEN

Mr. Westbrook Pegler, iconoclast of the sporting world, once again turns his back to the assassins, this time to name Primo Carnera's florid manager, Billy Duffy, "the most important beer baron in New York," and to list five or six prominent public figures, of which Maurice Chavalier is one, as regular clients of Mr. Duffy's exclusive grog joints.

In the most alarming expose since the Wickersham report, Mr. Pegler describes an interview with Primo at Duffy's main shop, where he and a friend had come to quaff a couple of quick ones after one of those routine Garden shows. Among the patrons, according to Pegler, were Johnny Dundee, Gus Wilson, former trainer for Carpentier, Leon See, another of Primo's company, Paulino Uzcudun, Maurice Chevalier, and a wet congressman from New York, "who drank nothing but coffee." When the elephantine Wop finally clumped in, Pegler dashed to meet him, "thinking to inquire into him and see what made him tick." But See was leading him into a corner when Pegler reached him, trying to warn the big cluck against talking too much. Here's practically all he said:

"'To have money; it is wonderful. Five years ago, not enough food, no shoes. Today 38 houses in California and plenty money and shoes, but I dont eat much now.

"'America is great place. I came here first on New Year's eve. Oh! Such drunk people. A crazy night. I thought they were all mad. I went to the Silver Slipper on Broadway. I take a glass of whisky. I spill some on my pants and it burn a hole in the cloth. Think what it does inside people.' But this was a faux pas. The Silver Slipper belongs to Primo's manager, Billy Duffy, but the goods may have aged since then. I do not mean to spread a harmful report." It wont be long now, Primo . . .'.

Westward ho! Back to California for Max Baer, away from the nite clubs and the little New York femme who has captivated his heart. That's the ruling of Ancil Hoffman, the Livermore lunk's guardian, who left San Francisco as a successful promoter, and returns, probably this week, as just another ring chump's manager. Current rumors have it that Maxie will fite Uzcudun in Chicago before returning to the coast, but intimates of Hoffman says he will be in San Francisco Saturday to personally fite for his license before the boxing commission, and that Baer is not likely to be left alone in the Windy City.

The California basketball team, considered out of the championship class last week, mustered its failing forces the week-end past and decisioned the Bruins twice in overtime contests to move into a tie for first place with U. S. C. If California can win over Stanford Saturday, which is altogether likely, the probability is that the Bears will win this division of the conference. They are coming strong now, while U. C. L. A. and Stanford are languishing.

Coach Dink Templeton has experimented a little with his track team, the last two weeks especially, and seems to have bolstered at

LEONE-FAMMATRE WEDDING JAN 25TH

Sunday, Jan. 25, Miss Tessie Leone and James Fammatre, Jr., took their marriage vows at the Holy Cross church in San Jose.

The bride is the daughter of G. Leone of San Jose and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fammatre of New Jersey avenue ,and well-known in Campbell.

The wedding took place at noon with Miss Marie Blase as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Dolly Goscila and Miss Celia Marsals. Peter Bronie was the best man with Frank Ruscigno and Pete Cornelie as ushers. The girls accompanying the bride wore dresses in pastel shades.

Present from Campbell and who attended the dinner for the bride were Mr. and Mrs. C. Fammatre and family, Mr. and Mrs. Brydon, uncle and aunt of the groom, and Marie Perazzo, sister of the groom.

Later in the afternoon a dance in honor of the newly married couple was held at the Italian hall on Market street.

DR. F. R. ANDERSON NEW HEAD, LOCAL CIVIC GROUP FOR '31

At the annual meeting of the Campbell Chamber of Commrece hld last night in the community hall, reports of standing committees were heard and election of officers for the ensuing year was held. The result of the election is: president, Dr. Frank R. Anderson; secretary, Ira R. Abbott; directors, T. A. Cutting, G. E. Farley, H. M. Shadle, S. N. Hedegard and Dr. Walter I. Merrill. The board elected Mr. Shadle vice president.

A communication trom the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce urged the local organization to request tthe support of Senators Johnson and Shortridge on the Free bill which will appear in the United States senate soon. It was voted to send air mail letters in place of the telegrams suggested by the San Francisco chamber.

The offer of a street decorating concern of Fresno, which desired to solicit Campbell merchants for Feb. 23 decorations was declined with thanks.

Dr. Anderson and G. E. Farley of the police, fire and lights committee reported that an interview with Supervisor Joe McKinnon had revealed a willingness on his part to co-operate, but that the project of additional street lights would have to come under next year's budget.

A discussion of the fire district and its proposed enlargement got nowhere. It was stated at this time that the department itself is not very sympathetic to the proposal for several reasons ,and that more co-operation would have to be forthcoming from the fire commissioners if anything is to be accomplished along this line. It was said that part of the commission favored the formation of another district outside the present boundaries, to be supervised by a different set of commissioners.

Rev. A. S. Buell of the jail investigation committee formally reported on the findings of the committee, and P. H. Dunlap suggested the appointment of a new committee to co-operate with the county authorities toward the aleviation of the deplorable conditions that now exist in the county jail.

S. N. Hedegard and H. C. Smith, appointed to ascertain the legal status of aPtrolman George Barnes, reported that Sheriff Emig had given Barnes the full authority of any deputy sheriff. Emig informed the committee that Mr. Barnes would not even be obliged to take his prisoners to San Jose, as the sheriff's office is ready at all times to send a man out to relieve the local officer of any prisoner he may take into custody.

G. E. Farley, publicity, reported on the work of his committee in getting information of Old Settlers day before the public. Workers on this job have already covered a good part of the county, and before the week is out all publicity except the final notices will have been attended to.

Reporting for the city beautification committee, C. H. Whitman stated that through funds secured from the county and gifts from generous citizens ornamental trees on both sides of West Campbell avenue have been paid for, planted and cared for, the watering being attended to by the county.

Developments in Fight Between Administration and Senate Over Relief Funds—Terrible Earthquake in New Zealand.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Rep. Tilson

REPUBLICANS in congress who support the administration started out the week by declaring there would be no compromise on relief legislation, even if the quarrel makes necessary an extra session. Their attitude was expressed by John Q. Tilson, majority leader of the house, and his statement was approved by James E. Watson, majority leader of the senate.

"In all matters of legislation where no question of principle is involved compromise is not only customary, it is ofttimes necessary," said Mr. Tilson. "But in connection with the proposed $25,000,000 dole there is no proper place for compromise. The amount of money involved in the initial appropriation is of relatively minor importance. Once the door to the federal treasury for a dole to aid citizens in distress is opened, the appropriation used as the opening wedge, whatever its magnitude, will soon pale into insignificance in the wake of what will follow.

"Once the Red Cross is destroyed, as it must inevitably be by a federal dole, and our local charities paralyzed, as they will be when the federal government takes over responsibility for charitable relief, the appropriations that must follow as a consequence of such a policy would now stagger belief."

Democrats and radical Republicans lost no time in responding to this challenge. Senator Caraway of Arkansas made one of his bitter attacks on the administration, the Red Cross and Representative Tilson, and he was followed by Senator Borah of Idaho who made a speech that brought cheers and applause from the Democrats and the insurgents. He took his place alongside those who threaten a filibuster unless the President yields on the matter of relief appropriation, shouting:

"I am perfectly willing to say that not another appropriation bill shall pass this body until the hungry are fed, until the sick are taken care of, until the government of the United States has met its obligations to its distressed and hungry citizens."

This brought from President Hoover himself a long statement in which he defended his policy and declared his confidence in the adequacy of the Red Cross to meet the situation. Some of the opposition saw a chance for a compromise in Mr. Hoover's assertion that "if the time should ever come that the volunteer agencies of the country . . . are unable to find resources with which to prevent hunger and suffering in my country, I will ask the aid of every resource of the federal government."

One proposal for compromise was to increase the drought loan appropriation by $15,000,000 with provision that, in the event of extreme emergency, it may be loaned for human relief purposes. House and senate leaders and Vice President Curtis all joined in negotiations to settle the dispute.

President Hoover dispatched personal representatives to Arkansas, center of the drought region, to report to him on the actual situation.

Paul M. Pearson

OFFICIAL announcement was made in Washington that the administration of the Virgin islands was being transferred from naval to civilian rule. Soon afterward President Hoover appointed Paul Martin Pearson of Swarthmore, Pa., to be the first civilian governor of the territory. Mr. Pearson is well known as an educator, lecturer and author, is a native of Illinois and is fifty-nine years old. The Virgin islands were purchased from Denmark in March, 1917, and since then have been under the control of the Navy department. Capt. W. Evans was the last naval governor.

REPEATED earthquake shocks of great severity wrought havoc in the Hawke's bay province of the North island of New Zealand, and were followed by conflagrations and tidal waves that added to the destruction. The large towns of Napier and Hastings and at least three other towns were virtually ruined. The number of the dead will not be known for some time, but it probably is nearly a thousand. Other thousands of persons were injured. All means of communication in the stricken area were destroyed and the only news reached Wellington and the outside world from ship wireless stations and eyewitnesses who had fled from the scene.

At Napier, the capital of the province, which has a population of 20,000, all the stone and brick buildings fell with a terrific roar, oil tanks exploded, and flames consumed most of the remaining structures. Bluff hill, which stood high above the city, collapsed and toppled into the sea, and the bottom of the harbor rose 18 feet, the anchorage pool becoming an island. Hastings, a plains town 12 miles from Napier, where most of the buildings were of wood, was razed by temblors and fire. The hospital and nurses' home collapsed on the inmates. The towns of Wairoa, Waipikuroa and Waipawa also were wrecked.

Martial law was proclaimed for the ravaged district, and the immediate evacuation of Napier was ordered by the authorities because of the danger of an epidemic. The city's water and drainage systems were entirely destroyed. Several British cruisers reached Napier harbor and Commodore Blake took charge of relief measures. Other vessels carried many refugees to Auckland. Property damage in the Napier area alone was estimated at $10,000,000.

E. E. Denison

ONE of those famous leaky congressional trunk cases that amused the country some time ago is going to get a further airing. Justice Josiah Van Orsdel of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals has made a ruling that Representative Edward E. Denison of Illinois must go to trial on an indictment charging him with illegal possession of liquor in his office on Capitol Hill.

Representative Denison was indicted by the district grand jury on November 19, 1929, eleven months after a leaking suitcase addressed to him was discovered by federal agents in the union station in Washington. An investigation led to the discovery of a trunk containing liquor in Mr. Denison's office, and in spite of the representative's assertion that both the trunk and suitcase were mistakenly delivered to him, an indictment was brought.

PRESIDENT HOOVER was advised by R. C. Stephenson of South Bend, Ind., president of the American Banker's association, that business conditions are improving in all parts of the country and should continue to get better during the rest of the year. Mr. Stephenson expressed the opinion that the business depression struck bottom on December 20, and that conditions have been on the upgrade since that time. He said also that if there were less talk of unemployment those who are employed would spend more.

Gen. Butler

WHEN Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler was Philadelphia's director of public safety six years ago he naturally made enemies of a number of bootleggers. It is reported that one of these disgruntled individuals first called the attention of the Italian government to the general's speech in which Premier Mussolini was depicted as a hit-and-run motorist and which is causing the gallant marine so much trouble.

General Butler will go on trial before a court-martial board in Philadelphia February 16, and the public will be admitted to the proceedings. Meanwhile he is free to go where he pleases in preparing his defense. Maj. Henry Leonard is his chief counsel at present. From close friends of Butler, it was learned that he will argue that the Mussolini story was simply an illustration, used in a military preparedness speech. It will be urged that no offense against the Italian premier was intended. One point to be stressed is that the hit-and-run story was not told in any attempt to get into print or because of any personal enmity toward Mussolini.

BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR., appeared in Washington before twelve traveling elders of the Methodist church, South, to answer to grave charges the exact nature of which was not made public. If the elders find the accusations have sufficient merit, they will order a trial which will be held at the next general conference of the church in 1934. The bishop, who is undergoing treatment at a hospital for arthritis, was accompanied by two of his sons.

ALBERT B. FALL, the only man convicted on criminal charges growing out of the oil leasing scandals of the Harding administration, bases his hope of escaping punishment on the claim he had no authority from congress to make the leases. The case was argued in the District Court of Appeals.

Frank Hogan, his counsel, in seeking reversal of the former interior secretary's conviction of accepting a bribe from Edward L. Doheny, said that since Fall lacked the proper authority he could not be guilty of accepting a bribe to influence a lease. Fall was convicted more than a year ago of accepting a bribe in connection with the Elk Hills (California) lease and sentenced to pay $100,000 and serve one year in prison. Doheny was acquitted.

Atlee Pomerene, special government counsel, replied to Hogan's argument that it made no difference whether Fall's act was "official" just as long as Fall had accepted the money to influence his decision.

The appeal of Harry M. Blackmer of Denver, who failed to appear as a witness at the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial and was fined $60,000 for contempt of court, also was argued.

Mrs. Mary Henderson

FOR some years Mrs. Mary Henderson, ninety-year-old social leader in Washington, wealthy widow of John B. Henderson who was a senator from Missouri, has grieved because Uncle Sam does not provide a residence for the Vice President. She has made several attempts to remedy this at her own expense, once offering a fine house when Calvin Coolidge was Vice President. Its upkeep was too expensive and he declined. Now Mrs. Henderson is trying again, offering to present to the government a handsome residence valued at something like $300,000 and situated on one of the exclusive streets of the Capital city.

At this writing congress had not decided whether or not to accept the gift, but Mrs. Henderson's granddaughter, Mrs. Beatrice Wholean, has asked the District of Columbia Supreme court to prevent the aged lady from disposing of any of the real estate belonging to the estates of her former husband and son. According to Mrs. Wholean, her grandmother is mentally incompetent properly to perform her duties and functions as trustee under the wills of her husband and son, and her removal as trustee is asked.

FOR the second time the senate voted on the appointments of Smith, Garsaud and Draper as members of the power commission, and the Democratic-radical Republican coalition rejected Smith by a vote of 40 to 33. The two others, however, were confirmed. The administration considers all three are legally members of the commission. The leaders of the coalition hold that this latest action perfects the senate's record in case the matter is taken into court.

Sen. Morrison

CAMERON MORrison, appointed recently to succeed the late Lee S. Overman as senator from North Carolina, disregarding the senate tradition that new members must sit silent for months, arose to warn his fellow Democrats that the Democracy of the South would not submit to the wet wing of the party, and to call for the appearance of a dry leader for the party. Said he:

"I am a party Democrat. And I am also a dry. I believe that millions of Democrats in this country feel as I do. If the great city organizations in array against the Eighteenth amendment seek to capture the Democratic party and put a wet plank in its platform they will find us resisting. We will not be driven out of the party neither will we submit to such domination. They will never override our consciences on that matter or force us to bow to party decree."

BY NO means satisfied with the prospects for self rule in India held out by the British government and the plans devised by the round table conference, Mahatma Gandhi and his lieutenants have decided that their campaign of civil disobedience shall be continued. A resolution to this effect was adopted at a meeting of the working committee of the All-India National congress, the members of which were released from jail when Gandhi was set free. It looks now as if they and the "holy man" will be in durance again before long. The Nationalists decided that all political prisoners must be freed before they will treat with the government, and that meanwhile the picketing of foreign cloth, narcotic and liquor shops and the illegal making of salt shall be continued.

A conference was arranged between Gandhi and his associates and the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce which it was faintly hoped might help clear up the situation, because the business men in the federation, who have been financing the Nationalist campaign, are said to be ready to call a halt.

GERMANY'S big flying ship, the DO-X, which is on its way to South America, made the first jump from Spain to the Canary islands without mishap, but in attempting to take off for the Cape Verde islands it was damaged by a wave. Repairs, it was believed, would take at least two weeks as it was necessary to get new parts from Germany.

AMONG those taken by death during the week were the duke of Vendome of the royal Bourbon line; Philip L. Hale, American artist and son of Edward Everett Hale; Mary Hampton, veteran actress, and Lady Decies, the former Helen Vivian Gould, granddaughter of Jay Gould.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Death of Lord Bentinck

SON of the fourth duke of Portland, one of the most famous sportsmen of his day, there is little reason to wonder at the fact that Lord William George Frederick Cavendish Bentinck had a passionate love of sport in his blood and that racing was the dominant note in his brief life from the day when he started to accumulate a stable of his own to the time when, having failed to win the Derby, he sold all his horses and abandoned the turf in despair.

One by one all the prizes of the race-course had come to him—with one exception. But the blue ribbons which crown the winner of the Derby seemed destined never to be his, despite the fact that upon several occasions they appeared to be within his grasp. So deep at last became his chagrin at the continued failure of his horses to win the grand prize of the racing world that, in a moment of pique, Lord Bentinck decided to sell all his stable and remove his colors from the field.

Among the horses which Lord George disposed of at figures which represented far less than their actual value was none other than the great Surplice, the winner of the next year's Derby and the St. Leger stakes. Lord Bentinck had actually had the coveted prize in his hands, only to let it go! How keenly he felt the blow may be gathered from the following entry in the diary of Lord Beaconsfield:

"I met Lord George Bentinck in the library of the house of commons. He was standing before the shelves with a volume in his hand and his countenance was greatly disturbed. Surplice, whom he had parted with among the rest of his stud, had won that paramount stake which had been the object of his life. He had nothing to console him and nothing to sustain him, except his pride. Even that deserted him before a heart which he knew at least would yield him sympathy. He gave a sort of superb groan.

"'All my life I have been trying for this and for what have I sacrificed it?' he murmured. It was in vain to offer solace. 'It is the blue riband of the turf,' he softly repeated to himself and, sitting down before a table, buried himself in statistics."

Was this disappointment the cause of Lord Bentinck's death, or was there foul play connected with it? was the question which all England asked, when, only a short time later, his body was found in an open field not far from his home. He had risen that morning, apparently full of health and spirits, and, at four o'clock in the afternoon, had set out to walk 'cross country to Thoresby, Lord Manvers' estate, where he was to spend the week-end. His valet, who had gone on in advance, awaited his arrival but, when night fell and the nobleman did not put in an appearance, a searching party was made up and it was not long before one of the members discovered the body, cold and stiff. Lord Bentinck had evidently been dead for some hours but what had been the cause of his mysterious death?

The coroner's jury, after considering the evidence for some time, finally agreed to commit themselves and returned a verdict of "Death due to the visitation of God; to wit, a spasm of the heart."

But there were many who were by no means satisfied with the vague verdict of the inquest. Lord Bentinck had always been a man of remarkable vigor and robust health and he had apparently never been feeling better than on the day of his death. Was it likely that such a man would drop dead during a quiet and unexciting stroll across the country? Was it not more likely that he had met some one closely related to him—some one whom rumor credited with having been the cause of a violent quarrel only a few days before—and that a scene had ensued, in the course of which Lord George had either fallen or had received a fatal blow?

Unfortunately, the ground had been trampled and all footprints which might have told of such an encounter had been obliterated by the time the officers of the law arrived upon the scene, and, as the verdict of the coroner's jury gave an excuse for dropping the case, the truth as to whether Lord Bentinck was struck down by "the hand of God" or by a much more human agency remains one of the mysteries which will never be solved.

North Sea May Be Drained

Plans for the drainage of the North sea to add more land to Germany and to obtain deposits of coal and other minerals, have been made by German engineers. While the idea is considered technically correct, it would have to be approved by all the nations involved and would cost an enormous sum. Dams would have to be constructed across the straits of Dover and from Denmark to Scotland. Rivers now emptying into the North sea would have to be diverted.

Bell Makers' School

The first bell founders' school in the world has been opened at Brilon, Westphalia, in connection with the Humpert bell foundry, which has been renowned since the Middle ages. Heretofore the art of casting bells has been the possession of a comparatively limited number of persons and the occupation has been kept mainly in the same families for centuries. Both theoretical and practical instruction will be given at the new school.

What Eleven Tubes Look Like

Miss Marguerite Clayton had an idea that the eleven tubes in the new model 111 Superheterodyne Plus Philco radio could be held in her two hands but she found they took up a lot more space than she thought. The instrument pictured here is the new Philco Superheterodyne plus highboy, one of the 1931 additions to the line. It is equipped with automatic volume control one control, station recording dial, and is non-oscillating.

least one of the weak events thru hin findings. Les Hables, ineligible last year but one of tthe leading sprinters on the coast, was shifted up to the quarter-mile, and turned in the remarkable time of 49.1 in his first attempt at that distance this season. Ben Eastman, who covered the 440-yard dash in 47.4 as a freshman last year, was changed to the half. He broke two minutes twice within the week past. That's simple strategy, but it is very effective. The 880-yard run has been Stanford's most pitiful event for the last several seasons, and now that it has been strengthened by this maneuver, the team should profit all around.

Joe Savoldi, the Notre Dame iron man, has definitely decided to occupy himself with professional wrestling for at least a time. He is said to have a bigger neck than either Sonnenberg or Donn George, and looks to be a good deal faster and tougher than they are. With his football reputation he should accumulate a goodly piece of change; and the cash customers always like to see the nice, clean college boys crack skulls—they have such a pleasant, absorbed way of doing it.

LOSE FAT
Safely and Quickly

Kruschen Salts—(a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body should have to function properly) purify your blood of harmful acids, and aid the kidneys and bowels to throw off waste material—the continual formation of which is probably the cause of your fat.

In this modern age of living its impossible to get these salts from the fancy foods you eat—but don't worry just as long as you have Kruschen Salts.

Take a half teaspoon every morning before breakfast in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energy. You'll soon possess that enviable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart.

An 85c bottle (lasts 4 weeks) at Clarks Drug Store or any progressive druggist in America. Money back if Kruschen doesn't convince you that it is the safest, quickest, easiest way to lose fat.

'A Hartford woman writes, "I'll tell the world Kruschen Salts is wonderful stuff to reduce." An Ohio woman lost 10 pounds with one bottle.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES
By Helen Gartner

Campbell's two basketball teams won a double victory over Fremont last Wednesday afternoon. The 130-pounders won by a score of 26-16 and the unlimiteds followed up with a score of 46-18.

Next Friday night, Feb. 13, our teams will play Gilroy here. This is next to their last game, the last being scheduled with Santa Clara. We want a good crowd with plenty of support—so everybody come!

The Campbell girls, with Miss Ruby Howes, brought home honors from the Los Gatos play-day last Friday afternoon. Our representatives were the Gold-A and Red-B teams.

Plans are being made, under the direction of Mr. Thielke, for a concert March 6.

We anticipate the holding of a play-day here Feb. 19. Santa Clara and Los Gatos are expected to be our guests.

The Oriole staff is steadily working. The contest for stories and poems was brought to a close recently. All senior pictures are in. We have decided to have individual pictures of the lower classmen instead of the regular group pictures. The art department is busy on the cover designs and all pictures are being prepared.

COPIES OF NEW BILLS AT LIBRARY

The following bit of interesting information received today from Senator Herbert C. Jones:
Press
Campbell, Calif.
Gentlemen:

The legislative delegation from Santa Clara county, consisting of Assemblymen Frank Lee Crist and T. M. Wright and Senator Sanborn Young and myself, have arranged for complete sets of legislative bills together with indexes to be sent to various convenient places in the county, including the following place in your community, namely, the public library.

These bills are for the use of the general public, and the offices or parties with whom they are on file will be pleased to make them available to the public.

Copies of individual bills may be obtained by writing to any member of the delegation or to the state printer at Sacramento.

We would be pleased to have you make announcement of the places where the bills may be seen, in order that the public may have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the measures now pending before the legislature.

Yours very truly,
Herbert C. Jones.

TELEPHONE SERVES THOSE WHO SPEAK LITTLE ENGLISH

"Was Wollen sie, mein Herr?"
"Oui, M'sieur, j'ecoute."
"Si, Signor, parlo Italiano."

San Francisco's own "league of nations" speaking.

The miniature league is now gathered in one spot on Grant avenue. It is made up of 49 inter-city telephone operators who speak 14 languages and they stand ready to help San Francisco's cosmopolitan people put hrough a telephone call between San Francisco and any of the 29 nations now interconnected by 91 per cent of the world's telephones, according to Miss M. Curran, manager of the Campbell office, acific Telephone and Telegraph company.

"San Francisco is one of the most cosmopolitan cities of the world," said Miss Curran. "When a member of one of the city's foreign colonies desires to call his home land and his lack of knowledge of English prevents quick and accurate service by the telephone girl, she notifies the long distance chief operator, Miss Catherine H. Walsh, who ascertains the man's native tongue and calls upon her 'league of nations' for assistance.

"Out of hundreds of inter-city operators serving San Francisco day and night, one-sixth speak foreign languages in addition to English. This record for cosmopolitanism in so small a group is believed to be equalled by few cities anywhere."

Congregational Guild To Meet With Mrs. Geo. Morton Feb. 19

A meeting of the Congregational Guild, sumer division, composed of women whose birthdays fall in the months of May, June, July and August, was held at the home of Mrs. R. Y. Maxon on Sunnyoaks avenue Thursday. The afternoon was spent in planning for future sales and entertainments to raise their quota of the expenses of the church.

The next meeting of this section of the Guild will be at the home of Mrs. George Morton on South First street, Thursday, Feb. 19.

Road Sweeper and Artist

The English town of Folkstone recently had an art exhibition of the local talent and one of the best specimens of painting was the work of F. Castle, who earns his living as a road sweeper for the Folkstone corporation. He has a humble home with a studio in the attic. "I think out my pictures as I work on the roads," he said, "and then I spend the week-end putting them on canvas, for that is the only time I have. Nobody taught me to paint. I suppose I must have a natural gift. Some day we shall be wise enough to organize work so that everybody with natural gifts will have enough leisure to develop them. Then the world will be a brighter and a happier place."

Gas From Cornstalks

Cornstalks may be combined with ordinary sewage and converted into a gas by a process so simple that anyone can apply it. After husking, the stalks are dried, shredded, boiled, soaked in water or lime. Then, together with the sewage, they are put into a small tank provided with a cover to permit the collecting of gases. The mixture is allowed to ferment—the bacteria in the sewage doing the work. The process was discovered by C. S. Boruff and it is being perfected by the inventor with the help of Dr. A. M. Buswell of the University of Illinois.

Stirring

They were undecided as to where they should go.

"Let's run along to the new cafe for a cup of tea," said George to his young lady.

"No, George," she replied. "I don't like the place—they never provide teaspoons there."

"I didn't know that," he admitted. "Why don't they?"

"Well, I suppose it's because they consider the music so stirring that spoons are not needed," was the reply.—Weekly Scotsman.

He (absent-mindedly)—My dear, when one is on the right side it generally isn't necessary to do much lying.

PREPAREDNESS IN BUSINESS

By R. S. HECHT,
American Bankers Association

My observations for many years, both as an employee and as an executive, have convinced me that the reason some men and women go ahead and others do not is that some keep themselves constantly prepared to accept and fulfill larger duties and responsibilities as they offer, and some do not.

Grant, as we must, that there is a certain element of luck in the conditions under which opportunity for promotion comes to different men and women, we nevertheless must also see that it is each individual's own state of preparedness which determines his ability to seize opportunity if and when it comes, and having seized it, to succeed in meeting the greater demands which it inevitably places upon him.

Real advancement never means going ahead to easier tasks, but always to harder ones. Opportunity for advancement is worthless unless in accepting it you are able to carry with you the abilities and qualifications that prepare you to meet the heavier exactions that are an inherent part of opportunity.

It is far better to go into action in the field of enlarged responsibility prepared and qualified, rather than that you and the institution you work for shall be exposed to the hazard of your having to build up to new responsibilities after having assumed them.

The new spirit of all business seeks to prepare its people in advance through education for the higher duties it holds in store for them.

Carbonated Waters

Artificially aerated waters had their inception in Priestley's success in 1772 in producing aerated mineral spring water. Large scale manufacture of aerated water was commenced by Paul at Geneva in 1790 and shortly after by Schweppe in London. In the United States, Priestley's experiments interested a Philadelphia physician, Dr. Philip Syng Physick, and he induced a chemist, Townsend Speakman, to prepare carbonated water for his patients. Speakman added fruit juice as a flavor, and the soft-drink industry in this country started at that time, 1807.

British Royal Palace

The present site of Buckingham palace, at London, was occupied during the reigns of Charles I and II by Mulberry gardens, a fashionable resort. It was then bought by the earl of Arlington, and Arlington house erected. This was demolished in 1708, and the ground bought and the original Buckingham palace built of red brick by John Sheffield, the first duke of Buckingham. He bequeathed it to his widow, who was a natural daughter of James I. It was bought for the British royal family by George III and settled by him upon his queen Charlotte.

Grange Holds Card Party

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Orchard City Grange held a very successful card party Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Hedegard on Winchester road.

The door prize was won by Norman Husted, and after a very pleasant evening, scores were counted and Harry Mitchell received a prize for the highest tally.

The proceeds of the card party are to be used toward the furnishing of the Grange hall when it is finally built.

The ladies auxiliary is also going to stage an entertainment Saturday evening, March 14, at the grammar school auditorium. A good show is said to be in the making, and tickets for the doings will be on sale in a few days. Further notices will appear in the Press.
